ABOUT ME

I feel that the best way to introduce myself is by the goals that I am currently working towards. I always try to learn from every situation that I am in. Throughout my life, I have found myself quite fond of challenging myself, whether it is by committing myself to learning ice hockey, which required me to learn how to, in a way, walk again, or continuing my education with the goal of getting into a PhD program. My ability to learn and become competent in any situation has been shown numerous times throughout my life and is an aspect I value in myself. I put effort into and strive to help people in their lives through stability by implementing psychological principles and findings in an ethical and moral way.

Thank you for your time and consideration
